If I were mayor, I would create fun events to engage my community. One big event I would hold every year is a spring festival. This event is important to me because I want people to be involved in the city. It might be hard to encourage the people in the city to come to the festival but I have a plan. I will encourage the people in the city by telling them how much fun it would be to attend the festival. I will also let them know there will be police officers if any crime happens. I will also give booths to businesses so they could make their product popular.

The most important part of this project is spreading the word. I have many ideas for spreading the word. One idea is to staple fliers of the festival all over the city. Another idea is putting billboards of the festival up to advertise. Also, the Internet is very popular now so I will also use it to promote the festival. These are the ways I can engage the community. If I were mayor his would be my mission.
