City of College Park Announces 2017 Community Survey

COLLEGE PARK, MD, January 24, 2017 - The City of College Park has partnered with the National Research Center (NRC) to conduct a comprehensive survey to gather community input on a wide range of City services. The 2017 City of College Park Community Survey will measure residents' attitudes and opinions on City services like refuse and recycling collection, City facilities and parks, City events, and economic development. This will be the first scientifically representative survey conducted in the City of College Park. "This is a wonderful opportunity for residents to give input on City services. The community survey will help guide the City to make decisions that best serve College Park residents" said Scott Somers, City Manager.

A randomly selected sample of College Park residents will begin receiving postcards from the City this week notifying them of their selection in the survey process. Mailed paper surveys will arrive in February, with a City cover letter and instructions as how to complete and return they survey. Responses are completely anonymous. The mailed paper survey will be in English, but a Spanish version of the survey will be available online for the selected respondents.

Participation in the survey is crucial to help the City make decisions that impact and benefit College Park residents. The results will help City officials better serve the College Park community, so please complete the survey if your household is selected. Help us shape the future of College Park!
